We start them young!

This month, the Eagle Flight website is undergoing some major changes that you can see later this month- we hope you will check it out! With Phase I behind us and the count-down clock for Phase II ticking away, we decided that it was time to update the website and make it a little easier for you to find your way around. We have added pages that will help you understand basic aerodynamics, information on Utah Valley State College's Aviation Degree Program and a new page that is titled the Eagles Nest. This page is devoted to our young aviation fans around the world. They can find information on the Young Eagles and Aeroscholars programs and they can even sign up for the Eagle Flight's World Explorers club!

We hope the new website offers more of an insight as to what goes on here at the Eagle Flight headquarters in Boise, Idaho and how a world flight is put together. We appreciate everyone who has emailed their questions and comments and we look forward to launching Phase II

The entire Eagle Flight team would like to thank everyone who has believed in our project from the beginning and who continue to support the Spirit of Exploration! Clear skies and we look forward to seeing you all this fall!

"Action, is Eloquence". Young people everywhere, regardless of their background and culture, were for a brief moment able to experience the world in a way that no literary description or verbal expression has yet accounted for. It is in the moment of a smile, or in the posture change of a young boy or girl as they walk across the tarmac, that the thrills, inspirations, and dreams of youth are apparent.

It has been a joy to witness Experimental Aircraft Association volunteers around the country give of themselves and their time to serve their communities. Those of us who have long been turning wrenches or flying the line may take for granted the privileges that are ours. It takes but one young man or woman for us to realize that although the flight may seem routine to us, to this young person, an experience to be relived and cherished for life is at hand. For them, the day of flight is no ordinary day.

Congratulations to the Eagle Flight Team for taking action.
