HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Eagle Flight Selects a Prepared Pilot Survival Kit

When flying solo around the world you need to be prepared for anything and you want to have the best, most reliable and most functional equipment available. With this in mind Eagle Flight chose a custom made Prepared Pilot Survival Kit to accompany Jared Aicher on his record setting flight.

The Eagle Flight chose a Prepared Pilot survival kit because of its compact rugged design and the high quality of the components. When flying solo over some of the most remote areas on the planet you need to be prepared. Conditions could force Eagle Flight to make an unplanned landing in an area so remote that it would take several days for help to arrive. "I want a survival kit that I know I can depend on because in fact my life might depend on it," says Aicher.

Prepared Pilot founder and president Rob Hunter, an FAA aviation safety counselor, paramedic, back country pilot and mountain search and rescue team member, has personally selected and field tested every piece of equipment in the Prepared Pilot Survival Kits. Hunter says "years experience and field testing by many people went into the selection of components for this survival kit." (Cont...)

From the Cockpit- Jared Aicher, Pilot

Hello and happy New Year to everyone! 2005 was an incredible year for aviation with many milestones accomplished by some of the greatest pilots and adventurers aviation has known. Pilot Steve Fossett flew the Virgin Atlantic Global Flyer into history by flying solo around the world without stopping or refueling in flight, Voyager captain Dick Rutan flew the first rocket plane between two U.S. cities and the world of private and commercial space exploration is coming to fruition. What an exciting time to be involved in the world of aviation!

Last year the Eagle Flight team also flew successfully to 41 of the lower 48 United States with the goal of instilling the spirit of exploration to the next generation of explorers. The future pilots, presidents, CEOs, astronomers, and teachers I encountered will be flying future missions to and from space stations in orbit around the Earth and possibly manning the first missions to Mars in the very near future. This year I will attempt to be one of less than 70 pilots who have flown solo around the world, and while doing so, offering free flights to an additional 100 youth in their home countries. Why am I doing this? Because the world needs dreamers and explorers, just as Christopher Columbus and Marco Polo dreamed of discovering new lands centuries ago, to carry us into the future and discover places and things we have never dreamed of. We, as humans, are still infants in our knowledge of the universe and each generation needs to be encouraged and placed on those first stepping stones to discovery.

I am not trying to make pilots out of the youth that I fly, but rather introduce them to the world of aviation science and let them view the world from a perspective they may have never experienced before and may never experience again. To all of you dreamers out here, I say dream big and fly as high and fast and as far as you can.

I was once one of those dreamers.
